The CMC’s affiliation with the MBA Nonprofit Connection provides individual career counseling and summer job listings for students interested in the government, as well as nonprofit and socially responsible firms and organizations.

The CMC works closely with hundreds of employers around the globe to support their hiring needs. The CMC conducts Recruiters’ Roundtables, on-site company visits and outreach, partners with various student clubs in planning of treks and facilitates thousands of on-campus interviews each year.

The CMC also offers part-time and executive MBA programs, as well as nondegree executive education programs.

The Kellogg School curriculum gives students the skills and experience needed to make a difference in their careers and in the world. Kellogg students benefit from an array of opportunities and initiatives in Management (GIM) course that includes 10 companies worldwide. One such example is the Global Resolution Research Center, Ford Center for Global Citizenship, Center for Social Innovation, Center for Biotechnology, Center for Business, Government and the Brookings Institution, Social Enterprise at Kellogg (SEEK), which reflects the converging challenges that managers face today in business, government and nonprofit organizations.

There are nearly 200 electives offered and several incorporate real-time problem-solving projects, working with companies worldwide. One such example is the Global Immersion Course that takes place every year and requires two weeks of rigorous classroom instruction followed by a two-week research trip abroad in which students meet with business executives and other researchers to complete their international research projects.

The Kellogg School also offers part-time and executive MBA programs, as well as nondegree executive education programs.

The opportunity to connect with and learn firsthand from alumni guest speakers and participants.

Executive Education classes at the Kellogg School’s moist and Scudder Center enable alumni to meet the changing needs of a global, dynamic marketplace.

The Alumni Admissions Organization involves more than 2,000 alumni who participate each year in admissions interviews and interview prospective applicants for the Kellogg School research. alumni.kellogg.northwestern.edu
