

A FOUNDATION FOR THE FUTURE

INVESTORS REPORT 2012-13

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

Kellogg
School of Management

Dear alumni and friends,

As much as this is an Investors Report, it is also living proof that a passion for collaboration continues to define the Kellogg community. Your collective support has powered the forward movement of our ambitious strategic plan, fueled development of our cutting-edge curriculum, enabled our global thought leadership, and helped us attract the highest caliber of students and faculty—all key to solidifying our reputation among the world's elite business schools.

This year, you also helped set a new record for alumni support of Kellogg. Our applications and admissions numbers are up dramatically. We have outpaced our peer schools in career placements for new graduates. And we have broken ground on our new global hub.

Your unwavering commitment to everything that Kellogg stands for helps make all that possible. Your continuing support keeps us on our trajectory to transform business education and practice to meet the challenges of the new economy. Thank you for investing in Kellogg today and securing the future for generations of courageous leaders to come.

All the best,

TRANSFORMING TOGETHER

A CAMPAIGN FOR KELLOGG

Kellogg's largest and most comprehensive campaign, "Transforming Together," will fund not only the school's new lakefront home on the Evanston campus, it also will support student scholarships, provide faculty support, underwrite our thought leadership, and establish global institutes in global markets like Brazil and China.

Why the need for such a campaign? It's simple: The world of business is changing.

The early 21st century has been marked by political and social change. The global economy is defined by new and diverse points of power with the customer, not the supplier, sitting at the helm. The marketplace is now physical and virtual, running 24/7 and driven by new technology and globalization. Everyone has a voice and the stage upon which to express it.

The nature of this new "Collaboration Economy" has challenged all in the business world to either adapt or be left behind. Once again, Kellogg has foreseen these changes and chosen to adapt.

Success in this new economy requires these leadership fundamentals:

- An intense customer and end-user focus
- Deep collaboration skills
- Agility and resilience
- Public statesmanship

Recognizing this paradigm shift, the school created "Envision Kellogg," a strategic plan that aims to reinvent business education. Through this new strategy, Kellogg will advance what we research and teach, engage our students through new programming and facilities, and enable our community to bring bold ideas to life.

With the help of several major donors, the campaign already has raised more than half of its goal. But reaching that final objective depends on everyone's commitment to Kellogg. By participating, you reinforce our community — the foundation of our strength and success — and help continue a legacy of educational leadership and innovation.

"This campaign is about the power of the Kellogg community," Campaign Director Julie Allen says. "If there is any community that can come together to achieve ambitious goals, it is this one."

Kellogg reimagined business education in the 20th century. Together, we can do it again.

Join us in realizing the possibilities.

INTRODUCING THE KELLOGG LEADERSHIP CIRCLE

Transforming through Annual Giving

As Transforming Together kicks off, we are delighted to announce that each Kellogg donors who makes a gift of $2,500 or more in any given fiscal year will be inducted into the Kellogg Leadership Circle.

As a member of the Kellogg Leadership Circle, you will enjoy advantages designed to recognize your generosity.

You'll receive updates on Kellogg's continuing progress, engage with other circle members and become a part of the intellectual life of the school.

KELLOGG LEADERSHIP CIRCLE

- Recognition in print and online Investors Report
- Receive Kellogg campaign newsletter
- Invitations to student-led conferences
- Invitations to "With Gratitude" event in May
- Invitations to signature Thought Leadership events (on-/off-campus)
- Invitations to leadership breakfasts before student-led conferences
- Recognition in the Kellogg campaign newsletter
- Dean's "State-of-the-School" webcast
- Invitations to leadership receptions for on- and off-campus events
- Invitations to Kellogg Strategic Summits

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY LEADERSHIP CIRCLE

- VIP assistance with university matters
- Invitations to exclusive events
- Membership in the president's book club
- Invitations to events with the president
- Invitations to university events and special access to campus facilities
- Invitations to exclusive annual leadership events
- Recognition in NU Honor Roll of Donors
- Leadership Circle newsletter
- Campus privileges
- Invitation to university events

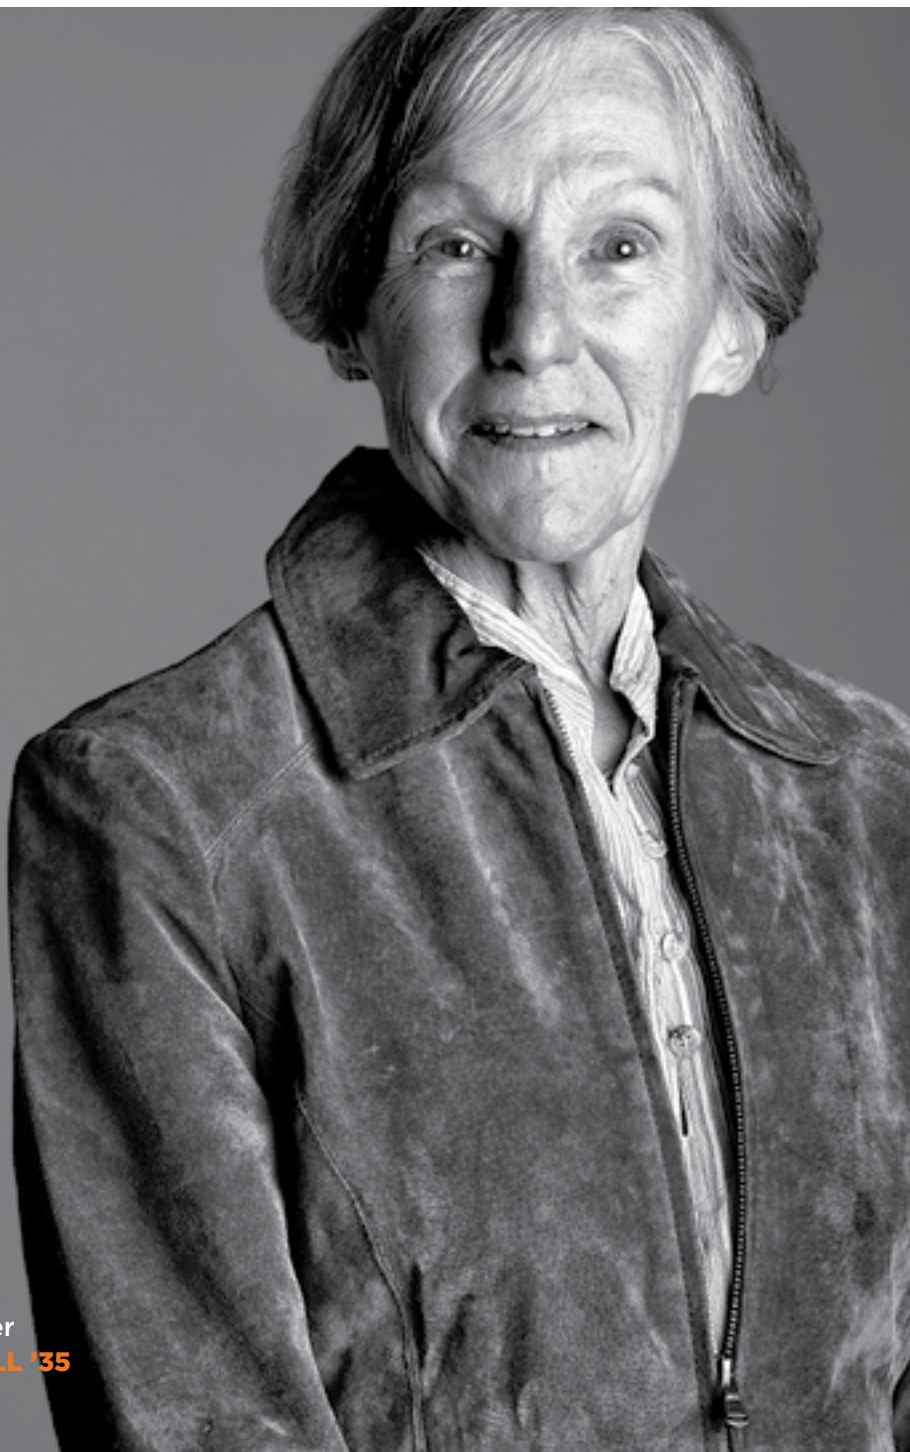

Supporting Kellogg's educational mission by building a strong Annual Fund is a vital part of the Transforming Together campaign.

Annual Fund gifts are immediately expendable and can be used to fund scholarships that bring the best students to Kellogg. They provide our students with the most rewarding experience possible. And they give Dean Sally Blount the freedom to say yes to great ideas raised by students or faculty. A gift of $2,500 in one year is spent the next year.

Annual Fund dollars are as much a part of Transforming Together as the largest gift to name a building. These dollars make an extraordinary difference in the lives of our students.

Join us as we transform Kellogg. Join us as we change the world.

PAYING IT FORWARD

With the help of his daughter Jean (pictured), JIM RUSSELL '35 leaves behind a lasting gift

There were three things you could count on when it came to Jim Russell: He would be in the stands whenever the Wildcats took on the Illini; family vacations meant either the woods of Door County or a beach in Florida; and if you ever needed anything, you could just ask.

“He thought about others,” his daughter, Dr. Jean Russell, says. “You wouldn’t know it unless you knew him because he wasn’t a braggadocious, boastful person.”

Maybe that big heart grew out of a humble childhood spent on a farm near Milan, Ill., or came from the relief of landing a full scholarship to Northwestern’s School of Commerce, Kellogg’s precursor.

Maybe it came from the joy of marrying his college sweetheart Helen or maybe it raised up like his 40-year career at Illinois Tool Works, where he would retire in 1979 as the firm’s chief financial officer.

Whatever the reason, that spirit never left, not even after he passed away in 2011. Mr. Russell bequeathed a gift in both his and his wife’s names, a gift that not only would fund a space inside Kellogg’s new global hub, but also fund a new program at Kellogg, the Master of Science in Management Studies.

The students are known as Russell Fellows. Jean Russell thinks her dad would approve.

THOUGHT LEADER

New courses, conferences and businesses highlight TOM HUBBARD's first year developing Kellogg's strategic initiatives

One year ago, Thomas Hubbard began the task of creating a new model to approach research and education, one that augments Kellogg's traditional strengths in academic disciplines by connecting them to four key initiatives: Markets and Customers, Architectures of Collaboration, Innovation and Entrepreneurship, and the Public-Private Interface.

Today, these initiatives complement the departments as the core of Kellogg's educational and research focus, says Hubbard, senior associate dean of strategic initiatives. All four have launched, with faculty and executive directors developing new coursework and programs. "It's been a year of building," he says. "The plants are starting to poke out of the ground."

Some have begun to bear fruit. Over the past year, Innovation and Entrepreneurship has debuted 10 new courses, added nine adjunct faculty members and helped launch more than a dozen new businesses.

Other initiatives have introduced new programming. Markets and Customers hosted the Marketing Leadership Summit, fostering a dialogue on new directions for marketing, and launched the Kellogg CMO Program, which prepares executives for the challenges of C-suite marketing management.

The next step is to continue reinforcing each initiative's key concepts while building up "investment areas," Hubbard says. That includes forging new corporate partnerships, creating new courses and expanding Executive Education. "We're thinking hard about how and where to invest," he says.

COURSE CORRECTION

With ValueAct, JEFF UBBEN '87 invests in wayward, undervalued companies

For many, change means a new tie or eating more greens. For Jeff Ubben, change is a seat at the table.

As CEO and founder of ValueAct, a San Francisco-based activist hedge fund, Ubben invests in companies to gain seats on their boards. From there, his group can effect change.

This kind of work can be risky. Case in point: ValueAct recently invested $2 billion in Microsoft, a company reeling from a decade of disappointing sales. But ValueAct's style of investing, which favors longer-term engagement, gives Ubben more time to help the company. "We try to make good companies better," Ubben says.

Ubben longed for this kind of work as a portfolio manager at Fidelity Management. Tired of others making the decisions, Ubben moved out west and worked as a managing partner at Blum Capital Partners, a private equity firm, before starting ValueAct in 2000.

Now managing more than $12 billion, Ubben has grown the company by making "a few good decisions each year," he says.

But some of his best work comes from working with charities like the New York-based Posse Foundation, which provides scholarships to gifted high school students overlooked by top-ranked colleges. "The long-term goal is to have leaders in the workforce better represent the demographics of our country," he says.

SOME ASSEMBLY REQUIRED

Named one of Fortune's Most Powerful Women Entrepreneurs in 2013, ANN HAND '99 is rebuilding the construction industry

The daughter of an entrepreneur, Ann Hand knew that building something was in her blood. Four years ago, she got the chance to prove it.

That's when she left a nearly 20-year career — most recently as senior vice president of global brand marketing and innovation at BP — to join the San Francisco-based construction startup Project Frog.

The name fits. The company quickly became a leader in the construction market by developing component buildings that are low-cost, stylish and energy-efficient. Imagine IKEA with a section for buildings.

"I've always liked a good brand puzzle," Hand says. "Each model year, we keep making the system achieve more."

It's a system that Hand has refined since joining in 2009, integrating smart technology to regulate airflow, light, and water and energy consumption. Now, Project Frog can erect a three-story, 100,000-square-foot building in less than half the time and cost of traditional construction.

And the big names have noticed. General Electric led a $22 million investment round a few years back, and now California-based health care giant Kaiser Permanente has contracted Project Frog to build two medical office buildings.

Now, if she could only change the name.

"We went out and asked customers," Hand says, "and they said, 'You can't change the name—you guys are Froggers.'"

A RELAXING INVESTMENT

MIKE SHANNON '83 takes an innovative approach to funding the hospitality industry

Mike Shannon loves spending money on unique vacations — other people's money, that is.

Founder and managing director of KSL Capital Partners, Shannon oversees the largest private equity firm specializing in the hospitality industry. Launched in 2004, the $3.9 billion private equity firm invests in iconic hotels and resorts, including Squaw Valley in California, home of the 1960 Winter Olympics.

How did the company grow during the recent economic downturn? The leisure and travel sector has proven recession-resistant thanks, in part, to “staycation” trends, says Shannon. “People are willing to drop the exotic overseas trips and allocate a larger share of their wallets to family vacations closer to home.”

He should know. In 1986, Shannon became president and CEO of Vail Associates. Then the youngest top executive of a major ski company at age 27, Shannon quickly turned the ski resort community on its head by rebranding the traditional day ski resort as a family-welcoming environment, complete with nonski activities and child-care services. He credits Kellogg with honing his hospitality skills.

“The school taught me the essence of hospitality,” says Shannon, whose son Tim just started his first year at Kellogg. “At Kellogg, I learned to work in a positive, friendly, aggressive way to create innovative products that delight people.”

THE CONSTANT CAREGIVER

A desire to help others has made
JOHN W. BLUFORD '75
a name in health care administration

What drove John W. Bluford into the medical field? A desire to help others ... and some persuasion from what he calls “timely scholarships.”

Not long after graduating from historically black Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., a recruiter from Northwestern approached him, Bluford recalls.

“He convinced me that going into hospital administration would be more productive than serving as a physician and that I could impact the lives of many more people,” he says. “I think he was correct.”

Today, Bluford is CEO of Truman Medical Centers in Kansas City, Mo., and considered a pioneer in creating access to quality care and premier services. Since starting his career in the late '70s, Bluford has become synonymous with providing innovative creative programs that are widely available to the communities they serve.

His efforts have been recognized. This year, Bluford received the National Center for Healthcare Leadership's Gail L. Warden Leadership Excellence Award. He also has chaired both the American Hospital Association and the National Association of Public Hospitals.

But even in light of those achievements, Bluford credits his staff, many of whom have worked with him for more than 15 years and some for as long as 30. The long-lasting relationships, he says, “make for a sense of continuity and achievement as a team.”

THE BUSINESS OF WINNING

After building a titan in beauty industry, LEONARD LAVIN and daughter CAROL are focused on developing strong leaders

Using a nimble-yet-aggressive management style to become a leader in the consumer products market, Alberto Culver knew how to face down multinationals and win. And that attitude came from the brain trust that led the company for years: Leonard Lavin and his daughter, Carol Bernick.

Lavin founded Alberto Culver with his wife, Bernice, in the mid-1950s as a single product company and saw longtime growth as the lines expanded and the company took share from its competitors. Bernick continued that growth through the '90s, ultimately succeeding her father as the company's executive chairman in 2004. Bernick currently operates Polished Nickel Capital Management and serves as chair of Northwestern Memorial HealthCare.

Kent Grayson, who holds the Bernice and Leonard H. Lavin Professor of Marketing chair, credits Lavin as having "literally invented many of the things I talk about in the classroom."

In addition to their success, Lavin and Bernick are substantial players in the philanthropic community with a focus on education and women and family services.

But the family's contributions extend past their gifts. Both Lavin and Bernick regularly meet with Kellogg students at various events. Rather than hope for success, Lavin and Bernick want to help create the next generation of business leaders.

"Winners make it happen," Lavin says. "Losers let it happen."

TRANSLATING DATA INTO INSIGHT

FLORIAN ZETTELMEYER
fosters the next generation of data-analytics executives

Florian Zettelmeyer remembers being a doctoral student back in 1994, teaching a group of visiting executives about the Internet. The execs were transfixed, Zettelmeyer recalls. So was he.

"I was most intrigued by the ease with which consumers could learn about products, firms and prices," Zettelmeyer says.

Fast forward to 2013. Consumers now generate huge volumes of data every day via smart devices, social media and transaction records. More and more have become intrigued by the idea of all this information commonly referred to as big data, something Kellogg realized some time ago.

"Five years ago, we started building an exceptionally strong set of data analytics courses at Kellogg," Zettelmeyer says. "Over the last few years, student interest and enthusiasm in these courses have been amazing."

With that in mind, Zettelmeyer has been tapped to launch a new curriculum that will "firmly establish data analytics as an integral part of what MBA students need to master," he says.

As part of the Kellogg Markets and Customers Initiative, the new coursework will be "relentlessly problem-driven," Zettelmeyer says, immersing students in the fundamentals of analytics. Students will graduate with both a technical and managerial understanding of analytics.

"We think that the importance of analytics reaches to the very highest levels of management," Zettelmeyer says.

FAMILY BUSINESS

Brothers GRANT '97 and ZACK GUND '00 use Kellogg lessons to build businesses

Brothers Grant and Zack Gund play hockey together, fish together, and buy and grow companies together.

The two are managing partners of Coppermine Capital, a private equity firm with $60 million in invested capital and 15 companies in their portfolio.

"Once we find the right leadership, we really are just stewards of the company," Grant Gund says. "We interact with our CEOs frequently, but we let them run the business."

Coppermine acquires small- to mid-size manufacturing and service companies with sales between $5 million and $25 million. Although their portfolio is growing — they added the 15th company in October — the brothers had a different plan when they joined forces in 2001.

"I went out with the intention of buying a company to go operate it, and Grant agreed we would co-invest in it," says Zack Gund.

But with the acquisition of their first company, which supplies baked goods to convenience stores, the brothers changed direction. Zack Gund says, "Over time, it morphed into more of a fund-type structure with a portfolio of companies."

"We completed our first deal in 2003, and we have not looked back," Grant Gund says.

THE EXECUTIVE ENTREPRENEUR

A Kellogg education gave TONY SCOTT '83 the chance to expand on his entrepreneurial dreams

As a teen, Anthony Scott grew a small paper route into a business serving 25 percent of Jackson, Miss. As an undergrad at Ole Miss, he created a “virtual stereo store” to serve the campus town. But he wanted an MBA to ensure business success.

The Charles S. May scholarship gave him that opportunity. “I couldn’t have afforded Kellogg otherwise,” he says.

“At Kellogg, I learned that the right team is the key to organizational success,” Scott says. He went on to found executive-search firm ChampionScott Partners to build leadership teams for tech companies globally. “We always trade part of our fees for equity, and it’s paid off nicely,” he says.

An interest in green technologies drove Scott to found Markilux North America to import retractable shading solutions for commercial and residential buildings. “Kellogg taught me how to successfully market specialized products and services,” he says.

Recently, Scott saw opportunities in China’s movie and TV sector, and co-created a fund for U.S.-China media joint ventures. He also has written three screenplays and two television pilots that are currently in development.

To pay back the “priceless opportunity” Kellogg gave him, Scott plans to bequeath 50 percent of his estate to the school. “I encourage my fellow alums to remember Kellogg in their own estate plans,” he says.

Giving to Kellogg

STAYING IN MOTION

T. BONDURANT FRENCH '76,
complements work with volunteering

The secret to T. Bondurant French's success lies in his mother's advice: "If you want something done, ask a busy person to do it."

"When you're in motion, you stay in motion and you get organized," explains French. "You get stuff done."

Indeed, as CEO of Adams Street Partners, the Chicago-based firm that pioneered the private equity investment industry, French manages a portfolio worth more than $25 billion.

But equally important to French is volunteerism. He serves as a trustee to Northwestern and the Chicago History Museum, where he also is chair. Between Northwestern and Kellogg, he sits on eight committees.

French participates in a number of other civic and professional associations, but also finds time to explore his own interests, like working with the Madison, Wis.-based Center for Railroad Photography and Art as its chairman.

French credits his parents for both his work ethic and altruism. Growing up in Peoria, Ill., he watched his family spend as much time volunteering for nonprofits as they did working.

"You find the time," he says.

We extend a special thank you to our

Kellogg Investors

BUILDING THE BETTER BATTERY

SiNode Systems, a NUvention-inspired startup led by CEO SAMIR MAYEKAR '13, is revolutionizing the lithium-ion battery

Moments after ringing the closing bell at the NASDAQ on a late August afternoon, Samir Mayekar explained why SiNode Systems is a name you should remember.

“We develop advanced energy materials to power human innovation,” says Mayekar, who serves as the company’s CEO.

The company — founded by Mayekar, fellow alumni Nishit Metha '13 and Guy Peterson '13, and three graduates from the McCormick School of Engineering — can back up that claim. Started in 2012 during a NUvention class, the group took a new material developed by McCormick professor Harold Kung and built a component that would allow lithium-ion batteries to charge up to 10 times faster.

They then created a business plan that had these next-generation batteries powering everything from smartphones to electric vehicles, revolutionizing a market expected to reach $25 billion by 2017.

The plan was a hit, evident by the many pictures of Mayekar and his colleagues holding ridiculously large checks. They took first place in three competitions, including the 2013 Rice Business Plan Competition, where they won a record $911,400 in cash, services and funding. The second Kellogg team to win the Rice contest in as many years (NuMat Technologies won in 2012), SiNode plans on having a commercial prototype ready by 2014.

“We believe that you need innovation in the energy sector to grow in emerging markets and to improve on environmental issues,” Mayekar says.

We extend a special thank you to our

HERE'S YOUR HOMEWORK: RUN A BUSINESS

RICK WILSON gives students an e-commerce business to run.

A retailer, a market researcher and a professor walk into a classroom ...

No, it's not the best joke, but it describes one of the latest and most popular classes at Kellogg: MKTG-957-O aka "Digital Marketing and Commerce."

Created through a joint partnership between Kellogg, Target, IBM, SapientNitro and market-research company Millward Brown, Digital Marketing and Commerce is an experiential-learning class where students put their knowledge of marketing theory and digital technology to the test by designing and operating competing e-commerce sites.

Student teams use IBM's enterprise-level technology to build and position their sites, then stock them with products from Target.com. Customers provided by Millward Brown shop the sites and buy products. As they compete with each other, the teams must use management reporting and consumer analytics to optimize their sites, meet customer needs and generate the most sales and profitability.

The class is a chance for students to gain some real hands-on experience, says Rick Wilson, clinical professor of marketing and creator of the course. And by real, he means six figures. Teams sold more than $700,000 worth of merchandise when the class premiered last spring.

"Experiential learning is becoming increasingly important to our students," he said. "The global organizations that they are going to join are looking for leaders that have some experience in navigating and applying the concepts we're teaching in this fast-changing, digital revolution era."

Kellogg in Action

LESSON PLAN

Brothers SELIM and SEDEM TAY-AGBOZO '14
plan their next venture

Selim and Sedem Tay-Agbozo always knew they would go into business together. Business school was another matter.

In 2010, Selim was a senior associate at Jefferies & Company in New York, and Sedem worked as a software developer in the Bay Area. Then, the two decided to launch a plastic products manufacturing company called Cavenishe back home in Ghana.

Despite early success, they encountered some organizational and strategic obstacles that convinced them to give business school a shot.

"It was obvious there were fixable gaps [in our plan]," Sedem, 30, says. "Last year [it] was evident that we needed to pull the trigger on this."

Having leveraged most of their resources on their venture, Selim and Sedem sought out and received separate scholarships to attend Kellogg. The brothers now live together in McManus, with Selim focusing on international business, finance and real estate and Sedem concentrating on entrepreneurship and management strategy.

Taking courses at Kellogg caused Selim, 29, to begin thinking differently. Another approach "probably would've saved us a lot of headaches," he says.

The brothers already have a new business in mind post-graduation: a Ghana-based firm with a focus on financial data analytics.

"We've finally found something that blends our talents perfectly," Sedem says.

We extend a special thank you to

Matching Gift Companies

The Kellogg School thanks all of the companies that have made contributions to the school by matching the gifts of their employees. We would like to extend special recognition to the following ten companies that made the highest contributions in total dollars matched from September 1, 2012 to August 31, 2013.

Abbott Laboratories Fund
Deloitte Foundation
Ernst & Young Foundation
Exxon Mobil Foundation
General Electric Fund

Google Matching Gifts Program
Johnson & Johnson Family of Comp.
Microsoft Corporation
The Baxter International Foundation
Wachovia Wells Fargo Foundation

Matching gift programs are a great way for companies to give back to the community by contributing to organizations designated by their employees. From September 1, 2012 to August 31, 2013, more than 220 companies generated $1,873,850 for the Kellogg School through corporate matching gifts.

For more information about how your gift to the Kellogg School can be doubled or even tripled by your employer, please visit Kellogg Annual Fund at kellogg.northwestern.edu/invest/matching or contact your company's human resources or personnel office to obtain a matching gift form.
